A new Proxy Motion Capture Data option within Studio allows Faceware Studio users to take a stand-in motion capture data file, called a Motion Capture Proxies, into Faceware Studio for use in their scenes. A new Faceware Studio Advanced will be released at a later date, but will include many long-requested features and enhancements. With just the release of the iDynamic Proxies for MotionBuilder Plug-in and the iDynamic Proxies for MimicStudio Plug-in, Studio Producers will be able to leverage the power of dynamic actors in MotionBuilder or in MimicStudio, where dynamic proxies move along with a target character. The iDynamic Proxies Plug-ins allow Studio to see dynamic actors as static models. Faceware Studio plugins that are available via the Support Downloads page include iDynamic Proxies for MotionBuilder and iDynamic Proxies for MimicStudio. Faceware Studio builds off of the foundation of the iDynamic Proxies Plug-in, which applies to MimicStudio, a proprietary SDK authored by Faceware, that is much like Blender for Animating. The iDynamic Proxies Plug-in incorporates the iDynamic Proxies Plug-in Engine which renders a motion capture skeletal animator in Studio, thereby setting up Studio as a dynamic proxy capture environment. Studio users will be able to animate in MotionBuilder directly using dynamic proxy actors. The iDynamic Proxies Plug-in is compatible with motion capture sources including Grasshopper, Blender, First Person and iPhone. Users will be able to capture facial animation data using Studio's motion capture plug-ins, send that data into MotionBuilder and then animate in Studio using dynamic proxies.
